Kathy Harman

Kathy Harman, PCC is a self-professed geek-turned-coach who specializes in helping technical women thrive in their careers. Having worked in IT since the dawn of computers, she knows the special barriers women face in making it in a man's world, and has helped countless women find direction and meaning in their careers. She is a skilled Agile team coach, supporting both technical and business teams in discovering their own unique path to high-performance. Kathy is the author of The ABCs of Living Well, and is currently working on her soon-to-be published book on Coaching Teams to High Performance.